Parameter C – Implementation, Monitoring, Evaluation And Utilization Of Research Results/Outputs

Completed and on-going research studies are periodically monitored and evaluated in local and regional in-house reviews.

The University of Southern Mindanao (USM) annually conducts in-house research reviews for faculty members and staff researchers, with a separate in-house review organized for students. These activities serve as institutional mechanisms for monitoring the implementation and assessing the accomplishments of ongoing and completed research projects, ensuring that research activities remain aligned with established objectives, timelines, and expected outputs.

The in-house research review for faculty members and staff provides a platform for researchers to present their research progress, discuss completed studies, report accomplishments, and receive feedback and recommendations from evaluators and fellow researchers. For ongoing projects, the review helps identify implementation challenges, assess progress against approved work plans, and determine appropriate measures to facilitate the timely completion of research activities. For completed projects, it provides an opportunity to present research findings, evaluate the achievement of project objectives, and assess the outputs and potential applications of the research.

Separately, the University conducts in-house research reviews for students to monitor the progress and evaluate the quality of their research projects. These reviews allow students to present their work, receive constructive feedback, and improve their research methodologies, analysis, and presentation of findings. They also help ensure that student research progresses according to academic requirements and established research standards.

Through these annual review activities, USM strengthens its research monitoring and evaluation processes and promotes accountability among faculty, staff, and student researchers. The separate reviews recognize the distinct requirements of faculty and staff research projects and student research while providing appropriate venues for evaluating progress, documenting accomplishments, and recommending improvements. Overall, these initiatives demonstrate the University's continuing commitment to maintaining research quality, ensuring project accountability, and fostering a culture of continuous improvement and scholarly excellence.
